The words translated "a horror of deep darkness" are, as others have seen, a gloss, but belong not to vs. 12, but to vs. 17, where the rare word translated "dark" seemed to require some explanation.

A jasper seal, with the inscription "Belonging to Shema, servant of Jeroboam." clearly cut in Phœnician characters, was found in March by the representatives of the German Palestine Society, at a site probably identical with the ancient Megiddo. "Its importance lies in the fact that it is the first inscription found in excavations in Palestine which actually gives us the name of a person known in the biblical record, and enables us by that fact to fix with certainty as Israelite the stratum in which it was found." It further encourages the hope that from Palestinian excavations, as from Babyonian and Egyptian, written records may be obtained by which the biblical records may be tested and supplemented.
